

LBTS First for Hospitality

Lilian Baylis improved its curriculum offer to Key Stage 4 students even further last year when it introduced the Young Apprentice Programme in Hospitality. With a similar programme firmly established for students wishing to study Business, we began working with HIT Training to develop a course where students work one day a week in a top class hotel in London's West End learning the skills needed to follow a successful career in the hospitality industry.

Students have been gaining experience in all aspects of the industry from working in the kitchens preparing food, to dealing with customers on the front desk, and their hard work is already paying dividends with all students successfully completing the first year and achieving the Level 1 award in, they will now be moving on to the Level 2 award as they begin the second year of this course.

A brilliant achievement one and all
